

Bankruptcy Information

This fact sheet explains how filing a bankruptcy petition will affect a Thrift Savings Plan (TSP) account or loan. Any questions should be directed to the Office of General Counsel, Federal Retirement Thrift Investment Board, 1250 H Street NW, Washington, DC 20005. (Telephone: (202) 942-1660)

How are funds in my TSP account affected by a bankruptcy?

The TSP is a tax-deferred retirement savings plan for Federal employees and members of the uniformed services. It is similar to retirement plans authorized under section 401(k) of the Internal Revenue Code. (See 5 U.S.C. §§ 8351, 8401-79.)

The funds in your account are held in trust for you by the TSP and are protected from the claims of creditors by a law which provides that the funds “may not be assigned or alienated and are not subject to execution, levy, attachment, garnishment, or other legal process.” (See 5 U.S.C. §§ 8437(e)(g).) This provision is enforceable in a bankruptcy action by virtue of 11 U.S.C. § 541(c)(2). Consequently, your TSP account cannot be made a part of your bankruptcy estate.

Is my TSP loan a debt?

No. Your TSP loan is not a debt because you are borrowing your own money and repaying it to your TSP account. The TSP is not your creditor.

Can my TSP loan be discharged in bankruptcy?

Your TSP loan cannot be discharged in bankruptcy because it is not a debt.

Must I stop my TSP loan payments when I file for bankruptcy?

The answer to this question depends on whether you file an action under chapter 7 or chapter 13 of the Bankruptcy Code.

A chapter 7 bankruptcy action will not affect your obligation to repay a TSP loan. Therefore, under a chapter 7 bankruptcy, you must continue making loan payments as provided in your loan agreement. This is because a TSP loan is not a debt and the TSP is not your creditor, so the bankruptcy court does not have jurisdiction over your TSP loan.

However, if you file a chapter 13 bankruptcy action, you must instruct your employing agency or service to stop your loan payments unless the bankruptcy court expressly permits them to continue. This is because in a chapter 13 bankruptcy, the bankruptcy court has jurisdiction over your income, and your agency or service may not deduct loan payments from your pay without court approval.

Your employing agency or service is responsible for stopping your payroll deductions for loan payments when it learns that you have filed a chapter 13 bankruptcy action. Therefore, you should give notice to your agency or service if you file for a chapter 13 bankruptcy and you have a TSP loan. Do not contact the TSP to stop your loan payments; only your agency or service can process such a request.

FACT SHEET

What will happen to my account if I must stop my TSP loan payments because I file for bankruptcy?

When you borrow from your TSP account, you agree to repay the money to your account, with interest, by making regularly scheduled loan payments through payroll deductions. (See 5 U.S.C. § 8433(g); 5 C.F.R. part 1655.)

If you stop making loan payments for any reason other than approved nonpay status, the TSP will send you a notice explaining how to bring your loan payments up to date. If you do not (or, as in the case of a chapter 13 bankruptcy, are not permitted to) bring your loan payments up to date, the TSP will close your loan account and report the unpaid loan balance to the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) as a taxable distribution to you. Besides having to pay income taxes on the amount of the distribution, you may be subject to a 10 percent IRS early withdrawal penalty.

Once a TSP loan account is closed, it cannot be reopened and the outstanding balance cannot be returned to the TSP. In addition, you cannot apply for another TSP loan for 12 months from the date a taxable distribution is declared.

Note for members of the uniformed services: TSP accounts for members of the uniformed services may include contributions from pay subject to the combat zone tax exclusion. If the TSP declares a loan to be a taxable distribution, any portion of the outstanding loan balance that is attributable to tax-exempt contributions will not be subject to Federal income tax or the 10 percent early withdrawal penalty.

Can I temporarily suspend loan payments during my bankruptcy action?

No. The IRS requires the TSP to close a loan account and issue a taxable distribution if payments do not continue under the terms of the loan agreement.

What if the bankruptcy court allows me to repay my loan?

If your employing agency or service has stopped your loan payments, you should immediately instruct it in writing to resume deducting your loan payments. You must provide the agency or service with documentation that allows it to determine that you are permitted to have your loan payments continue. By the end of the next calendar quarter, you will also have to make up any payments you missed out of your personal funds. Information about making up missed payments is available from the TSP Web site (www.tsp.gov) in the Account Access section under Loans. You can also call the TSP Service Office at 1-877-968-3778 (TDD: 1-877-847-4385) or, outside the U.S. and Canada, at 1-504-255-8777.

Please note, however, that your loan payments can only resume if the TSP has not yet closed your loan account.

Can the bankruptcy court change the terms of my TSP loan agreement?

No. Because your TSP loan is not a debt and the TSP is not your creditor, the bankruptcy court does not have jurisdiction over your TSP loan. Therefore, the bankruptcy court cannot change the timing or the amount of your loan payments or require the TSP to accept loan payments through your chapter 13 plan.

However, if your loan is in good standing, you can ask the TSP to reamortize your loan to change your payment amount or shorten or lengthen your loan term within the loan's maximum term limit.

Can I obtain a hardship withdrawal during my bankruptcy action?

The answer to this question also depends on whether you file an action under chapter 7 or chapter 13 of the Bankruptcy Code.

A chapter 7 bankruptcy action does not affect your ability to obtain a financial hardship in-service withdrawal.

However, a participant who is a debtor in a chapter 13 bankruptcy action is not eligible for a financial hardship in-service withdrawal based on negative net monthly cash flow. This is because such a withdrawal is only available to a participant who demonstrates that his or her net monthly income is insufficient to pay ordinary monthly household expenses. In a chapter 13 bankruptcy action, the bankruptcy court will ensure that the debtor has sufficient funds to pay living expenses.

However, if you are in a chapter 13 action, you may be eligible for a financial hardship in-service withdrawal if you have unpaid medical expenses, a casualty loss, or unpaid legal fees incurred for a separation or a divorce. See Forms TSP-76 and TSP-U-76, Financial Hardship In-Service Withdrawal Request.
